Garden State LSAMP (Louis Stokes Alliance for Minority Participation) alliance is a National Science Foundation (NSF)-funded program that provides academic support and specialized advising for students from historically underrepresented groups who wish to enter non-medical STEM professions.

Student benefits include:

- Faculty-mentored research, including paid summer research opportunities and international experiences
- Travel funding to present research projects at conferences, to conduct international research, and/or compete in STEM competitions
- Tutoring with the Science Enrichment Center, EEC, and Academic Success Center or with individual tutors.
- Workshops to assist with preparing for and applying to graduate school GRE Prep courses and ALEKS Online Course
